Remember that the Woodruffs have been growing seed for four generations—not that we are any better than other growers but there are many things we have learned not to do in growing seed crops—such as not cutting turnip seed too green, and not planting red radish where white radish was grown for five years before, and not to use sweet corn seed for stock seed unless we are sure no other corn was planted within a mile of it, and not to run one kind of peas after another through a clipper cleaner without spending a couple of hours to clean the mill, and not to plant cabbage after kale or turnip, and not to take in seed from a farmer grower unless he does as he is told, and a hundred and one other things not to do, and there are a lot of “nots” we haven’t learned yet, So Why Not take advantage of some of the Not To Do’s it has taken us so long to learn.
